After almost 14 months, ImpressCMS has released another jam-packed major release - version 1.2. Even after having won Most Promising Open Source CMS in this year's Packt Publishing awards, they continue to push forward and deliver time and again. Some of the key additions to this already feature-rich community and content management system are An online image editor A new user profile module, with social networking features and customizable fields for your site
 A new content manager module The ability to assign different home pages for different user groups Easier customization for filtering HTML input from users Easier customization for verifying user identity through a CAPTCHA image Lots of administrative improvements

The full release announcement contains more information, as does their changelog. If you would like to try a demo first, you can test drive it at OpenSource CMS. ImpressCMS 1.2 has the makings of a significant player in the CMS arena in the coming years - be sure to check it out
